[...] Many services on Palm Sunday begin with "the Procession of the Palms," where worshipers hold palm branches as they process into the church. The ashes drawn on ancient tradition represent repentance before God. For instance, the Didache, a 1st or 2nd-century Christian text, commends "the baptizer, the one to be baptized, and any others that are able" to fast to prepare for the sacrament.[31] For centuries it has been common practice for baptisms to take place on Easter, and so such references were formerly taken to be references to a pre-Easter fast. Origin Early Christianity records the tradition of fasting before Easter.[27] The Apostolic Constitutions permit the consumption of "bread, vegetables, salt and water, in Lent" with "flesh and wine being forbidden."[27] The Canons of Hippolytus authorize only bread and salt to be consumed during Holy Week.[27] The practice of fasting and abstaining from alcohol, meat and lacticinia during Lent thus became established in the Church.[27] In AD 339, Athanasius of Alexandria wrote that the Lenten fast was a forty-day fast that "the entire world" observed.[28] Saint Augustine of Hippo (AD 354-AD 430) wrote that: "Our fast at any other time is voluntary; but during Lent, we sin if we do not fast."[29] Three main prevailing theories exist on the finalization of Lent as a forty-day fast prior to the arrival of Easter Sunday: First, that it was created at the Council of Nicea in 325 and there is no earlier incarnation.
