The poems Beowulf and Sir Gawain and the Green Knight both display powerful men and highly esteemed warriors. However, the main characters in each of these poems, Beowulf and Sir Gawain, are fundamentally different individuals. Both poems are very in that they both describe essential characteristics of valiant warriors and knights of the day. These characteristics include bravery, honor, heroism, and loyalty. The characteristics are shown in a variety of aspects by each of the characters. Beowulf exemplifies bravery and heroism throughout the entire epic poem, showing his embodiment of being the greatest warrior among men. Sir Gawain is described as being one of the noblest of knights, who exemplifies chivalry, loyalty, and courteousness. Beowulf ...show more content.... Though Sir Gawain is only really faced with one particular obstacle, it presents itself as a key turning point in Sir Gawain's life. This hurdle includes a situation where Sir Gawain is presented with a certain "game." A game that Sir Gawain thinks is only a custom between a knight and a lord. The lord speaks to Gawain and says, "'let's make a pact. Here's a wager: what I win in the woods will be yours, and what you gain while I'm gone you will give to me. Young sir, let's swap, and strike a bond, let a bargain be a bargain, for better or worse.'" (lines 1105-10) Gawain replies to this proposal with a hearty, "'By God, I agree to the terms, and I find it pleasing that you favor such fun.'" (lines 1111-12) This situation spikes into a situation where one day the lord goes out on a hunt, returning with a deer, his gift to Gawain. On that same day Gawain receives a kiss from the lord's wife, and so in turn of his reception of the deer he gives the lord a kiss. His word is kept. On a second day the lord returns with a hog for Gawain, and Gawain exchanges his gift with two kisses. His word is kept. On the third day the lord returns with a fox for Gawain, and Gawain exchanges this for three kisses, but this is not all that Sir Gawain received on this day, he also received a sash from the lord's wife. He does not keep his word. He has gone against everything he stands for. This ...show more content... Beowulf, the hard headed, gung-ho warrior, proves himself worthy in the face of any impossibility. Success, in the face of death, presents a change in character of anyone. In the case of Beowulf, he comes out as a much wiser, more mature fighter and warrior. His success helps him to develop more improved tricks and techniques to his fighting and leading style. These techniques create followers who build a legacy out of Beowulf. Beowulf's encounters only made him better and smarter in every way. In a complete one-hundred and eighty degree turn Sir Gawain, the noble, loyal, chivalrous knight proved he was willing to sacrifice himself for the greater good but fell short on his promise to Lord Bertlak. This fault proved to be one of Sir Gawain's only. His failure to keep his word came back to nick him in the neck, making him cognizant of mistake. In this recognition, Sir Gawain shunned himself as any honorable man would. He will spend every last day of his life making up for the mistake he made in dishonoring his word which will in turn change his perspective on every further challenge he is faced In order to continue enjoying our site, we ask that you confirm your identity as a human. Thank you very much for your cooperation. Beowulf and Sir Gawain are very noble and honorable warriors. But, they are both very different. In both the epic poems they relate back to heroes that are "legendary" and have "awe-inspiring lore", having the protagonists undergo strenuous journeys and fulfilling their deeds of good riches. Creating the image of their struggles and how they overcame it in their society. To start they are both heros, A hero is the main character in a story who is noble and courageous, they have to risk their lives on journeys and win battles. Beowulf and Sir Gawain both have heroic qualities including skill and bravery. Beowulf is a hero because he goes around the land to fight evil monsters who threaten his town and civilians. He fights them to save his people but he also loves the fame he gets from doing so. Sir Gawain is a hero because he saved his uncle. He goes on a journey to meet the Green Knight and battles him in place of his uncle, King Arthur. When they meet, the knight cuts Gawain but does not kill him, the whole thing was a test of Gawain's loyalty to the king. They also have religious beliefs Beowulf talks about his fate and God throughout the story. When someone got close to the dragon and did not die he said it was because of fate, when Beowulf died the narrator said, "As much as God would grant him; all worldly pleasure was gone, as life would go, soon" (739-740). This is showing that Beowulf's journey has come to an end and the fate of the battle was for him not to win. With Sir Gawain his trust in God is shown when he is praying for protection and forgiveness before his duel with the Green Knight. Beowulf and Sir Gawain have many similarities but these are the ones that stuck out the most. Need a custom essay on the same topic? Beowulf was meant to be a warrior and goes head on into the situations he was faced with, when he was going to fight Grendel he did not even want to wear armor or use a weapon. But with Sir Gawain he was not about to volunteer to fight the Green Knight and the only reason he did was to save the king. He was too afraid of death that when he met the woman and she offered him the silk that could save him, he immediately took that because he was afraid to die. In this quote "If the gift meant remaining alive, it might well be worth it,"(230). We see that the character is willing to fight to stay alive for the token he received from someone he loves. But, in the quote explaining Beowulf courageousness "The fact is unferth, if you were truly as keen and courageous as you claim to be Grendel would never have got away with such unchecked atrocity. attacks on your king, havoc in Heorot and horrors everywhere,"(590). As goes to show Beowulf scores one off of unferth: unferth can talk smack about Beowulf's past deeds; but the truth is that unferth himself doesn't have any great deeds to boast about. Beowulf suggests that unferth shouldn't go around insulting other warriors' courage up until he has done something courageous for himself. In the end, Unferth never got the better of Grendel, so why should he sneer at Beowulf for trying to help him out. Overall, we see that both characters have certain downfalls in both their journeys in becoming an epic hero. Even though they are both honorable warriors, we see that there is more to them when it comes to similarities and differences. You see that they are both heros that portray religious views, and also having a different willingness to fight, to advance in their society in many ways possible. But, in the end these stories of great heroes that lived a legacy for the people of their society and are still mentioned to this day. Did you like this example?
